FOREIGN NEWS.

TURKEY.

The Attempted Pacification

LONDON, April 18. The Russian telegraphic agency announced that Baron Rodisch finds that the Turkish Pacification Commission will concede no guarantees beyond the promises of the Porte. Rodisch declares that such instructions leave no hope of an understanding. The insurgents adhere to the conditions already known. Rodisch referred them to direct negotiations with the Porte. He deems it impossible to support any conditions except those contained in the programme. Rodisch, however, asked Mukhtar Pasha to renew an armistice for a month. Meanwhile Mukhtar is marching on Nisheh. The Porte has received the insurgent demands very unfavorably and adheres to the programme which it now believes carried out. The Cabinets are exchanging views on this new phase of the crisis, and are resolved to pursue the work of pacification with common accord.

EGYPT.

The Truce with the Abyssinians Broken.

LONDON, April 17. An Alexandria, Egypt, letter of the 8th says: "I called in a former letter that the truce arranged between the Egyptians and Abyssinians after the battle of Gouru, had been broken. There has been further fighting and at first I stated that the result was so much in favor of Egypt that King John gladly resumed pacific negotiations. Now, however, it is gathered by all that the Egyptian army is in great difficulty and King John demands the abandonment of the country, and the cession of Massowah. Further fighting will probably be preferred to such submission of superiority."

Mr. Johnson, who has been attending him, finally induced him to return to Conway by representing that they were going to Boston. The Press states that the mental condition of Mr. Willis has grown worse and that an attendant is constantly employed.

SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT.

NISI, (CIVIL) TERM.

APPLETON, Chief Justice, Presiding.
EZRA C. BRETT, Esq., Clerk.
REED SMITH, Esq., Stenographer.

Tuesday, April 18.

Thos. J. Chase vs. Inh. of Orrington. Action to recover for injuries to plaintiff's horse by reason of a defect in a road in defendant town. The plaintiff passing along the road in winter with his horse and sleigh, met another person with a horse and sleigh, who in endeavoring to pass plaintiff got his horse out of the travelled way into the snow and ditch, and in his endeavors to get back, his horse sprang against the plaintiff's horse with such force as to run the arm of the sleigh into the body of plaintiff's horse, causing its death. Plaintiff presented testimony to show a defective and insufficient breaking out of the road, which defendant controverted. The Court instructed the jury that the defect in the road must be the sole cause of the injury or the plaintiff cannot recover. Verdict for defendant.

Up-River Items.

Our correspondent Nopen writes from Whig April 17. The Penobscot river opposite Wilson village is clear of ice from the Lake Island shore to the Brown Islands below. The ice above the village set Sunday and went down to the Brown Islands this morning.

The steamer John A. Poor will commence to run from near Pleasant's, Passadumkeag to Winn as soon as the travel will warrant, both by land and water.

Blueberries are now being hired to go on to the drives of the small streams on the East and West branches.

The ladies of Silver Star Lodge of Good Templars are intending to have a good time on May 1st, to close with a dance. The programme is not yet announced.

Preparations are now being made for the Sunrise sojourn.

A large quantity of railroad ties are at the depot awaiting transportation.

The snow has almost entirely disappeared in the fields around about here, but large quantities undoubtedly remain in the woods.

Mrs. F. E. Chase, for several years past a successful assistant in this place, has removed to Waterville, where she will continue in her trade.

COMMITTEE MEETING.

The Investigating Committee of the City Government met yesterday afternoon and examined a large list of witnesses. The first one called was Alfred Day, of Brewer. The following is an abstract of his testimony:

SPRING FASHIONS.

[PHILADELPHIA Evening Post.]

THE GOODS SHOWN AT THE NEW YORK "OPENING" FOR WOMEN'S AND CHILDREN'S USE.

The spring openings, which are now ended, have brought the most decided change in the shapes of bonnets. These are no longer worn on the back of the head, and have not the flaring brim of the last two years. The shape resembles the close capote worn in Paris during the winter, the front being raised to admit of lace trimming, instead of the fall of lace which in the capote fell on the hair and gave the close-fitting appearance of a cap. The turban, the English walking hat and the Derby are the favorite styles for round hats. The French milliners design round hats for the American market with narrow brims, because of the general use of veils in this country.

HAT AND BONNET TRIMMINGS.

Flowers are used on bonnets chiefly, while feathers are restricted to round hats. Ostrich feathers sometimes completely encircle the crown of a bonnet, but a full wreath of the flowers is the newest form of trimming. On less dressy bonnets sprays or bunches of large flowers are used, in combination with silk (basket-woven or soft twilled silks being preferred,) frosted crepe and gauze. Cream, écru and fawn color are the shades most in use in straw. Black straws, which are also very popular, are trimmed with light shades of pink and blue, pale yellows and brilliant scarlets intermingled. In many cases the crowns of the straw bonnets are cut entirely away, and soft crowns of silk, gauze or crêpe de chene are substituted, a shirring at the back draws in this crown, and forms a little stuff cape of the material. These crowns are often made of gaily-striped gauze scarfs which also furnish the lace trimmings. Network which enters largely into all this year's trimmings is also used on hats. The crown and lace trimmings are entirely covered with soft open meshed nets. Lace cream-colored, as a general thing, is used on dressy bonnets. Valenciennes, tinted or of its own creamy whiteness, form a handsome style of trimmings, but it needs to be genuine, and therefore is rare. Long lace strings are either allowed to hang perfect from the back of the hat, or taken a round to the front and knotted loosely on the breast. Ruffs of lace bonnets are so completely covered with leaves and fruit, or like flowers, as to leave very little of the ground-work to be seen.

CHILDREN'S FASHIONS.

Little girls, from six to ten, wear hats which turn down all round and up in the back. The flowers and bows are placed on top. Brown, white, and white and navy blue combined, are the favorite colors. Older girls wear turbans, and especially the Derby (these have scarfs of soft tabbied silk or Madras colors, or plain colors, and a stuff wing on one side. Sailor hats are of dark blue straw, the brim turned up all round. For little boys these sailor hats are worn like those worn by Portuguese sailors; the angle worn is immaterial. "Scarpus," in gilt letters on the front, give the ship their nightly watch appearance. Scotch caps, in blue straw, are also very low; these have a little tarnished silver ribbon.

Children's dresses are still worn short, and pull to the blouse shape is a special favorite for boys and girls of five or six. It is sometimes made double breasted, and is confined at the waist by a scarf of soft woollen material, the color of some stripe in the dress. Often the edges of the blouse are cut in squares and bound. The very plainest methods for making up children's garments prevail, simplicity in trimming being seen in all the samples sent from Europe. The favorite suit of street garments for little girls is of gray cloth, with gabrielle front, sacque back and gilt pearl buttons set in at the waist, a broad sash reaching from the waist to and ties loosely at the back just above the kilt plaiting. Variations of this, in which embroidered bands or silk galloons define tabs and pockets on the front of the dress, are found in all the children's dress departments. Little boys wear English walking jackets over their kilted suits, these have galloons of worsted or silk as bindings, and handsome enamel buttons.

Wide embroidered bands come expressly for ladies' dresses, these are also to be found in cream tints, as well as white materials.

Sashes are bounded in various colors, always contrasting. Towers and shells pending the newest patterns. Continental sashes are red, white and blue ribbons with fringy ends; these are also sold for children.

SCARFS AND GARNITURE FOR GENTLEMEN.

Of the gentlemen's scarf-shaped. The Puritan shirt for spring have seams attached which are meant to be carelessly draped about the shoulders by the wearer. These are rather difficult to wear, and are not readily adjustable. A scarf designed for more general wear is made square in the back, fitting to the waist, and held in place by fastenings underneath. The ends cross in front and are carried to the back and draped over the seam, of the ends are allowed to hang in front. The plain scarfs of like material to the dress are made three and a half yards long, all when the material is not wide the width is allowed for in width of the scarf.

In black silk or in self-tones, which is a favorite mixture, for outside garments, the scarf shape is greatly modified. The dolman or sacque shape, with long square ends, takes the straddling scarf, that a component of the two styles. Fringes with deep cotton headings trim these garments, and are sometimes laid on to imitate a band of the back, a bow and ends finish the point of the scarf, and are set on where the garment is confined to the waist.

Whitened silk or satin-face, bonnded in the back and crossing on the breast, are also fashionable. Lace, fringe and gimp trim the edges of these. Embroidery or application on coarse net is extensively used on silk and cashmere garments. This has also been put to use on black silk or grenadine dresses, sometimes with white silk for under it.

Scarfs are the most popular substitutes for overdresses, particularly at the theatres. Two or three scarfs carried across the front of the dress and draped at the back in the most graceful and intricate manner formed the principal feature of all the new dresses shown at the openings. These having been used on evening dresses need little description.

Netted scarfs or netted edges to scarfs, with meshes are the newest and prettiest designs in trimmings.

OTHER TRIMMINGS, PARASOLS, ETC.

In Europe the newest trimmings consist of fine embroidery in silk on the garments themselves. For ball or evening dresses colored embroideries are preferred. Wreaths and festoons of the flowers, delicate ferns and leaves are embroidered on the scarfs which form trimmings, these are interspliced with butterflies, beetles and birds, so that the dress sparkles with color and tinsel. This is of course done by the very best houses. Colored laces, especially in one color, are much used, silk lace on black silk, some laces are used worked with gold, but as a general thing gold and silver have had their day and have given way to other novelties. Steel is more used both as jewelry and in trimmings than anything else. Cut steel beads are introduced in embroidery, in trimmings, and cut steel ornaments on hats and bandeaux. With the use of beetles and butterflies in embroidery a passing fashion in jewelry of odd earrings and lockets in gold and enamel has come in. Fantastic beetles, lizards, little birdcages and tiny birds are represented, and just now much used in Paris for full dress.

Parasols and sunshades in ligen, pongee and silk assume the pagoda shape. The linen ones, for the seaside, have trimmings of the same; while fringe and lace are used on the more dressy ones. The old fashion of confining them with a rang when closed has come again.

Stockings to match all costumes will be used again this season. Lisle thread stockings have embroidered stripes of colored silk on dark or plain ground. Fancy embroidery in colors, both in silk and lisle thread stockings, is confined to the foot and ankle, for stockings designed for slippers and the stripes running up and down have entirely superseded the stripe running round the stocking. All grades are imported at all prices.

Gentlemen as well as ladies wear the undressed kid gloves imported for spring. These are stitched on the back; and for ladies, in the lightest and most delicate tints, including ivory white. They are the most serviceable as well as dressiest glove for street wear.
